

DC Water: A critical service at a reasonable price

When comparing DC Water to other critical services that District residents need to survive and thrive, DC Water is truly a value. According to 2014 data, a monthly water and sewer bill in the District is still lower than a household's cell phone bill, electric bill or wintertime gas bill.

DC Water: Rates are similar to cities across the country

Rates are rising across the country. We recognize the burden that rising rates are placing on customers and we are working to decrease costs and generate new revenue sources. When compared to other cities with similar environmental mandates, DC Water's charges are lower than the average.
